

Come For the Festival — Visit San Diego, Too

Each November, Trad Jazz fans come to San Diego to attend the Thanksgiving Dixieland Jazz Festival, but countless other tourists come throughout the year to see the fantastic museums, historical sites, animal parks, beaches and other attractions available here. Unfortunately, with great bands and exceptional musicians performing from morning till night during the Festival, jazz fans have no time to visit the area highlights.

Perhaps this year you should plan to extend your stay. The Town and Country Resort & Convention Center offers exceptional rates for the Festival with complimentary parking, and you can get the same great rates and benefits for any additional days before or after our event. (Garden: $99 single, $99 double, $109 triple, $109 quad. Regency Tower/Courtyard & Royal Palm/Terrace: $119 single, $119 double, $129 triple, $129 quad).

If you come early or stay later, you can check out our parks including Cabrillo National Monument, Balboa Park, Mission Bay and the Old Town Historic Park. Visit the world famous San Diego Zoo, Wild Animal Park or Sea World. Spend time on the San Diego Bay at the USS Midway or on a Harbor Cruise or Seal Tour. Try your luck at our exciting casinos, such as Pala (The Pala Casino-Spa-Resort sponsored one of our Festival Bands in 2008). Other casinos in the San Diego area include Sycuan, Viejas, Barona and Harrah's

Celebrate the 'Prez' and More At 2009 Thanksgiving Festival

2009 is the centennial year for jazzmen Benny Goodman, Gene Krupa and Lester Young. Young was one of the most influential tenor saxophonists in jazz. His musical legacy will be honored at a special set during the 30th Anniversary San Diego Thanksgiving Dixieland Jazz Festival (Nov. 25-29, 2009 at the Town & Country Resort & Convention Center). The saxophonist who pay tribute to "The Prez" is Anita Thomas. Anita is no stranger to the Thanksgiving Dixieland Festival, having appeared previously with Hal's Angels, the Reynolds Brothers Rhythm Rascals, Oz-Chi and the Hot Jazz Instructors. She will be reunited with Hal's Angels during the 2009 Festival for the Lester Young tribute. In addition, Anita will make guest appearances with several of the Festival bands.

For our 30th Anniversary, AFCDJS is pleased to present a new type of music at the Festival — Western Swing. Billy Mata and the Texas Tradition, one of the best contemporary Western Swing bands, will introduce this wonderful music to our patrons. Joining the band on piano is the incredible Carl Sonny Leyland. Besides his expertise as a Western Swing pianist, Festival attendees can hear Sonny in solo, trio and small band settings.

The versatile John Gill will play banjo and lead the Yerba Buena Stompers; sing the music of Bing Crosby with the Sentimental Serenaders and "rock the joint" with the new rockabilly band Real Gone.

Two other Festival musicians who play more than one instrument are Dave Bennett (clarinet and piano) and Katie Cavera (guitar, banjo, string bass). Dave is bringing his Benny Goodman-style quartet to the Festival. He will also take charge of the piano and vocals on a tribute to Jerry Lee Lewis! Expect to hear Katie play and sing with her own small combinations throughout the weekend.

Stride piano wizard Neville Dickie returns to the Festival in 2009. On his last visit to San Diego, he brought the house down with burning-hot performances of compositions by James P. Johnson and Fats Waller. We know he will play more of the same this coming November!

San Diego's own Chloe Feoranzo is coming back for her second featured

Dixieland, Trad Featured At May, June Concerts Dixie Express May 17

San Diego's Dixie Express Jazz Band will play the AFCDJS Monthly concert-dance on May 17, 1-4 pm at the Mississippi Ballroom of the Lafayette Hotel & Suites, 4555 El Cajon Blvd. in San Diego.

According to the band's information sheet, Dixie Express "plays Dixieland, traditional jazz, blues, ragtime, swing arrangements and crossover tunes with a touch of Western Swing."

The band evolved from the members' participation in two of AFCDJS' educational programs: the monthly Dixieland workshop and the annual Adult Jazz Camp. In the recent past, Dixie Express has played at the Lawrence Welk Resort, the North Park Spring Festival, Julian 4th of July Parade, Twilight in the Park at Balboa Park and is featured in the independent film "Am I Blue." The band has also played at previous AFCDJS monthly concert-dances and at the San Diego Thanksgiving Dixieland Jazz Festival. At the 30th Annual Festival, on Wed. Nov. 25, they will share the stage with the High Society Jazz Band. Meanwhile, you can hear the band every Wednesday from 6-8pm at Fuddrucker's/Grossmont Center in La Mesa.

Dixie Express is co-led by reedman/vocalist John Contreras and drummer Dave Austin. Their musical colleagues are Ray Couteau, cornet; (AFCDJS Executive Director) Alan Adams, trombone; Ken Dillard, piano; Jim Goodwin, guitar and banjo; and Tim Smith, bass.

S. Burgundy St. June 21

The South Burgundy Street Jazz Band returns to the AFCDJS monthly concert-dance series on June 21. The band was a hit in 2008 and we are pleased to welcome this group back.

Its website specifies that the band plays the music of "The Hot 5s and 7s, Jelly Roll Morton, Firehouse Five, Lu Watters, Turk Murphy, Night Blooming Jazzmen, New Orleans Flat Four and Spirituals."

South Burgundy has performed at the Colorado River Jazz Festival, Redding Jazz Festival, Sweet & Hot Music Festival and most of the Sunday afternoon jazz clubs in Southern California.

Led by reedman Mike Olson, the band includes CJ Sams, cornet; Robert Butler, trombone; Patrick Aranda, piano; Jim Jones, banjo; Buddy Apfel, tuba; and Jon Lundgren, drums and washboard.

In 2009, look for South Burgundy St. at the San Clemente Rotary Dixieland By The Sea Festival (June), Vancouver Classic Jazz Festival (September) and the Pismo Beach Jubilee By The Sea (October).

Sam Lipman

Clarinetist Sam Lipman died in La Mesa, CA on Mar. 13, 2009.

Mr. Lipman was born in the Bronx, New York. He graduated from CCNY (now CUNY) and served with a special services unit in the US Army. During the years following the war, he received a teaching credential from Hunter College and a Master's Degree in Mathematics from Florida State University.

After relocating to San Diego, he taught at Balboa Elementary School and married Mildred Brunner — also a teacher.

Besides teaching, Mr. Lipman conducted seminars on math for other teachers and co-authored a series of children's books on math. Later he joined Waddell & Reed as a financial planner, retiring in 2004.

In addition to his teaching and work as a financial planner, he enjoyed playing clarinet with such groups as the South Bay Jazz Ramblers, Finest City Jazz Band, Wesley Palms Jazz Band, the Fynetones and his own quartet.

Mr. Lipman was preceded in death by his wife. He is survived by sister Estelle Kandel of Baltimore; daughters Beth Westburg (Reid); Anne Lipman (Jim Phillips); Laurie Lipman; four granddaughters and companion Jill Gormley.

Esther R. Smith

Esther R. Smith, one of the first AFCDJS board members, died in San Diego Mar. 9, 2009.

She was born in Terre Haute, IN on Oct. 3, 1921. Esther married Harold W. (Smitty) Smith in 1945 and the couple settled in Indianapolis where their only child, Harold Jr. (Hal) was born in 1953. In 1962 the family relocated to La Jolla, California.

From 1962-65 Esther and Smitty worked at Scripps Institute of Oceanography, then the University of California San Diego Chemistry Department. Later Esther worked at Cal Tech in Pasadena, retiring in 1986.

She was active in AFCDJS as a board member and as volunteer at the San Diego Thanksgiving Dixieland Jazz Festival, primarily at the office and the information booth. She also worked as a volunteer at many other festivals across the U.S. and opened her condominium in La Jolla to out-of-town musicians who performed at the Thanksgiving Festival, AFCDJS monthly concerts and local engagements.

Esther was preceded in death by her husband and sisters Alice and Dorothy. She is survived by son Harold Jr. (June) of La Jolla; sister Rose Thompson (Al) of Banning; brother Gilbert Rowe (Marlene) of Grand Rapids, MN; and beloved nieces and nephews.

Esther was interred at El Camino Memorial Park following a private service on Mar. 18. Donations may be made in her memory to America's Finest City Dixieland Jazz Society or the George G. Glenner Alzheimer's Family Center Inc.

Lester Young . . .

In 1928, he left the Strutters to work with Art Bronson’s Bostonians, a territory band based in Salina, Kansas. While with Bronson, Young switched to tenor sax. Over the next few years he shuttled back and forth between Bronson and the family band, played with Walter Page’s Blue Devils and also toured with the legendary King Oliver and his Orchestra.

Following another stay in Minneapolis, he relocated to Kansas City. There, he had the first encounter with an orchestra led by a pianist from Red Bank, New Jersey named Bill Basie. In short order, Young became one of the titans among Kansas City reedmen. Numerous musicians recalled a jam session where Lester outplayed a visiting Coleman

Hawkins, who at that time was the reigning king of tenor sax. However, Young left the Count’s band in March of 1934 after receiving an offer to replace Hawkins in the Fletcher Henderson Orchestra. Unfortunately for Young, what should have been a triumphant debut quickly turned sour. His light, airy, alto-like sound did not project through the Henderson brass and reed sections.

A majority of Henderson’s musicians lamored for the leader to replace the newcomer with Chu Berry, whose tone more closely approximated Hawkins’. To add insult to injury, Henderson’s wife tried to convince Lester to change his tone by playing Hawkins records for him at every opportunity.

Perhaps the only positive development during his brief stay with Henderson came at a jam session, when Young met vocalist Billie Holiday. The saxophonist and the singer quickly became friends. She showed him around New York and provided much-needed moral support as he continued to experience difficulties within the Henderson group. The friends bestowed nicknames on each other and Billie became “Lady Day.” As a devoted admirer of President Franklin Roosevelt, Holiday considered Lester to be “President of all the saxophonists.” She gave him the nickname that he would carry for the rest of his life — “Pres.”

Finally, in despair, Young went to Fletcher Henderson and asked to be released from the orchestra. Chu Berry came in on tenor sax and Young departed for Kansas City. Upon his return he played with Andy Kirk, then rejoined Basie.

Late in 1935, jazz activist John Hammond — who assisted Benny Goodman to reach national prominence as a bandleader — was listening to his car radio. He accidentally dialed in a broadcast by the Basie orchestra from Kansas City. Hammond recalled being “overwhelmed” by Basie’s swinging orchestra. Within a short time, he was promoting the Basie Orchestra in person and in print. His rhapsodic description of the band convinced Goodman to fly to Kansas City, where he heard Basie in person and, in a supreme moment of inspiration, gave a clarinet to Lester Young!

Hammond convinced Willard Alexander, of the Music Corporation of America, to book Basie on some East Coast engagements. He also approached the American Record Company and talked them into offering a recording contract to Basie. However, when Hammond arrived in Kansas City to talk business, he discovered that Decca’s Jack Kapp had already signed Basie to a much-less-favorable contract. The orchestra was scheduled to record for Decca in New York in January, 1937.

Before the musicians departed for New York, Hammond managed to set up a small-band record date, including Young, for Vocalion in Chicago. On Nov. 9, 1936, Lester Young made his recorded debut.

the drummer. The family moved away from New Orleans and eventually toured the South and Midwest. Despite his initial enthusiasm, Lester tired of the drums. He wanted to play an instrument that could be packed up quickly after a job, to allow more time for socializing with "the nice young ladies." He settled on alto saxophone, and his sister Irma helped him learn the basics. In a short time, he was a featured attraction with the Young family band! (Younger brother Leonidas — "Lee" — took over the drum chair and later became a world-renowned jazz drummer).

A decade later, one of Lester Young's most distinctive traits was the way he held his sax — at a severe angle, away from his body. Over the years, many theories have been advanced to explain the stance — to hear the instrument better; to alleviate pressure on teeth, etc. Whatever the reason, it did not occur overnight. There is a photo of the teenaged Lester holding his sax at the same odd angle!

The family band was renamed the "New Orleans Strutters" and they continued to tour around the country, interspersed with a lengthy stay in Minneapolis. Young took every possible opportunity to hear other touring bands such as the orchestras led by Fletcher Henderson and Paul Whiteman. He also began to collect records and played along with them. In this manner, he learned to replicate solos by Louis Armstrong, Bix Beiderbecke, Red Nichols, Jimmy Dorsey and others on his alto sax. During a residency in North Dakota, one of the Young band's saxophonists, Eddie Barefield, was playing a new recording in his room — "Singin' the Blues" by Frank Trumbauer and Bix Beiderbecke. Another band member knocked on his door. When he opened it, Lester Young politely asked who the saxophonist was on the record. Trumbauer's playing on

Lester Young – Transforming Hot to Cool

(This is the 73rd in a series of biographies of great traditional jazz musicians.)

*By Hal Smith
AFCDJS President*

British reedman and author Dave Gelly once wrote, "If imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, Lester Young was one of the most flattered men in musical history." Young's tenor sax playing inspired countless jazz musicians — including those who played other instruments! Before the proliferation of Young disciples on tenor sax overwhelmed the progenitor of the style, he was properly viewed as one of the most important links between the hot jazz of the '20s and modern jazz of the '40s.

Lester Willis Young was born in Woodville Mississippi on Aug. 27, 1909. He was raised in Algiers, Louisiana, just across the Mississippi River from New Orleans. As a child he reveled in the heady musical atmosphere of the Crescent City. He passed out handbills to onlookers as bands in wagons and trucks and marching brass bands advertised dances, prizefights and other events. During his youth, it is extremely likely that Young heard the greatest New Orleans musicians such as King Oliver, Freddie Keppard, Kid Ory, and Louis Armstrong. At the time, Young was particularly attracted to the drums. Louis Cottrell, Dee Dee Chandler, John McMurray, John Vigne and younger drummers like Chineé Foster and Zutty Singleton must have made an extraordinary impression.

Lester's father, Willis, was a musician. He taught the Young children how to play a variety of instruments and organized a family band in the early 1920s, with Lester as
